Tragedy can alter the course of a woman's life forever... Even when no one understands the pain. Andi Davenport believes the only way to get on with her shattered life is to escape and begin again in a new place, but after losing her barrel horse in a tragic accident, just leaving home may not be enough to keep her from hurting over the loss of her best friend Ballatino. They were partners in the rodeo arena for years. After losing him in a tragic accident, Andi wants nothing more to do with horses or barrel racing. Moving to the city of Tulsa seems like a good way to get a new start -- until she arrives. . . Dr. Cameron Landers is in the business of healing, specifically rehabilitation of injured horses. His business is in danger, however, and because of recent accidents in the stables, he is in need of more help with the horses and quickly. When Andi moves in next door and Cameron discovers she knows horses, he thinks she could be the perfect solution to his problem. But then he realizes Andi is in need of quite a lot of healing herself. Danger threatens Cameron's career as he realizes someone is out to destroy him. Andi cannot stand by and watch while his career and the horses he works with are endangered and she unites with Cameron in a common cause. She quickly comes to love the horses at Cameron's center, and it isn't long before she realizes she has feelings for him as well. But there is no time for romance between Andi and Cameron until they stop the enemy in time to keep themselves and the horses alive.
