This is the Canadian edition of the Community as Partner text. Using a variety of Canadian references, this text provides the framework to conduct a community assessment and work with the community to develop health-promoting programs. It has a practical focus on community assessment, data analysis, community-level issue identification, program planning, intervention, and evaluation. Unit One now provides a completely Canadian perspective on health promotion, epidemiology, health risks, public policy, and multicultural communities. Unit Two reflects the community as partner model with a Canadian approach, and Unit Three contains case studies with Canadian examples. Each chapter will include specific learning objectives, key points, practice and research sections, and discussion questions.
