The central role that good, effective and capable governance plays in the economic and social development of a country is widely recognised. Using the Commonwealth countries of eastern and southern Africa, this book analyses the key constitutional issues in the process of developing, strengthening and consolidating the capacity of states to ensure the good governance of their peoples. Utilising comparative material, the book draws lessons, both positive and negative, about the problems of constitutionalism in the region and critically addresses the legal issues involved in making constitutions "work" in practice.
