Studies in Rashi, Shelach - Pinchas (Chassidic Heritage) R. Menachem M. Schneerson
The second volume from Studies in Rashi; the 17th volume in the Chassidic Heritage series.

This item follows the same format as the first Studies in Rashi, with a page by page translation of two Rashi sichos (Parshas Shlach 1965, Likkutei Sichos vol 18, pp.141-149 and Parshas Pinchas 1977, Likkutei Sichos vol 33, pp 170-175). Minimal English commentary and sources are brought down in footnotes, and several more details are written in the Hebrew endnotes.

The first sicha, entitled here Miriam and the Spies: A Lesson in Speech, the Rebbe analyses the Rashi in which the reason for the proximity of the recounting of the sin of Miriam and that of the spies is brought down. In examining Rashi's commentary, the Rebbe comes to a deeper understanding of the similarities and differences between the two incidents, drawing out a profound lesson into the power of speech and learning from past mistakes.

In the second sicha, Korach's Sons: The Power of Teshuva, the Rebbe breaks apart Rashi's commentary on the verse "אָדָּה וְאָדָּה" (אָדָּה וְאָדָּה), questioning amongst other things, Rashi's logic and wording. Out of his subsequent resolution emerges a fresh perspective on the power of teshuva, even mere thoughts of teshuva.
