Stasis ulcers (open sores usually found on the lower, inner area of the leg above the ankle) occur as the result of problems with the return of blood through the veins in the lower extremities. Elderly homecare patients are especially at risk for developing these ulcers, and agencies frequently care for patients with this problem. Understanding stasis ulcers will allow home health aides to support the healing process. This in-service lesson looks at the important role home health aides play in caring for a patient with a stasis ulcer.

LESSON OBJECTIVES After completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to:

- Name three things that lead to developing stasis ulcers
- Explain the difference between a stasis ulcer and a pressure ulcer
- Identify three treatments for stasis ulcers
- Name three ways to prevent and control stasis ulcers

Contents of this lesson:

- A clearly written fact sheet
- A 10-question post-test to measure understanding of the subject matter
- An answer sheet with a place for the instructor's comments and signature
- An illustrative, homecare-specific case study
- Suggested supplemental learning activities
- An attendance log and certificate of completion
