'My thoughts were in turmoil as we drove back to Rockwell. Was our season over before it really started?' Had the obstacles placed in their path finally derailed Rollins girls' varsity soccer team's chances of winning the state championship? Had Maggie and her senior friends succeeded in persuading the school administrators to keep the program mediocre? At the time, the answers to these questions seemed the most important, indeed, the only concern in Bobbi's life. High school freshman Bobbi Martin had already conquered her fears about acceptance at her new school. She had cleared her boyfriend Alan of starting the fight in the cafe. She had no idea the exposed culprit would seek revenge by intentionally causing an automobile accident. A broken leg would cut Alan's football season short. And before her freshman year ended, Bobbi's best friend's involvement with alcohol and drugs would almost take her life.
