How can anyone believe that the unbounded complexity of living things can arise from inanimate matter without the hand and mind of our Almighty Creator?

In an impressive display of evidence covering the pertinent categories of the creation/evolution controversy, Dr. Carl Baugh marshals statement after statement from evolutionary literature showing the impossibility of the evolutionary mechanisms.

He delves into the origin of life issues, the stasis problem, and the record of the fossils. His chapter on design, a prominent topic in the current controversy, covers the spectrum of evidence and proves once again Paley's original statement: "Design requires a Designer!"
