In 1706 Francisco Cuervo y Valdés, the governor of the Spanish province of New Mexico, founded the fourth villa in New Mexico. He named it la Villa de Alburquerque de San Francisco Xavier del Bosque, in honor of the viceroy of New Spain, the Duque de Alburquerque. This fully indexed and documented book includes historical and genealogical information on the known founders of present-day Albuquerque. Three generations of descendants are also included for each founder. This essential work for students of New Mexico history highlights and documents the perseverance and determination of these early New Mexican settlers.
